

Donna Nespoli is a life long activist for animal causes, including wildlife conservation and animal welfare. She has been volunteering with animals since 1991 and for wildlife causes since 2002, including wildlife rehabilitation and prairie dog ecosystem conservation. She is currently state and federally licensed for the rehabilitation of small mammals, including bats, and birds. She holds a Bachelors of Science in Art Education from Central Connecticut State University and Bachelors of Science from Colorado State University in Zoology.

Donna on left and Judy, her Mom, on right.